St. Elizabeth Medical Center, along with KHI Foods and Giminetti Baking, has introduced a line of foods formulated for cancer patients.

Comfort Care Foods is a newly formed company offering a line of soups that provide the protein and fiber of a full meal in an eight-ounce serving, and whole wheat bread enriched with protein and fiber, according to a news release.

Cancer patients often suffer from nausea and loss of appetite, and almost one-third die not from the disease itself, but from malnutrition, the hospital said.

Helene Gruber, St. Elizabeth nutrition service director, and other staff dietitians worked with Burlington boutique food manufacturer KHI, and Cincinnati baker Giminetti to develop the Comfort Care line.

Comfort Care Foods, based in Burlington, is owned and managed by Millard Long, a local food processor and entrepreneur. For more information, call St. Elizabeth Public Relations at (859) 301-6300 or click here .
